November 2020

Hello and welcome to our November newsletter! Can you believe it's November already?

October was another busy month for InAutomotive with recruiters predominantly searching for Vehicle Technicians, Servicing & Repairs and Account Managers.

The most exciting news last month is that new customers can post a job for free to trial our service! (T's & C's apply.) Make sure you don't miss out!

Visit recruiting.inautomotive.com/free-trial-job for more information.

Last month, we also conducted some more research into how automotive professionals felt the government and their employer has handled the pandemic so far.

We were pleased to hear a lot of good news stories about employers doing right by their employees, but there were obviously some very sad stories told too. While things are difficult at the moment, there are still career opportunities out there, many which are published daily on InAutomotive. We truly hope change is around the corner for you!

That's all from me until next month! Stay safe and enjoy bonfire night!

"Boris is an absolute shambles who can't even brush his hair"

Our latest report into Covid-19 details how professionals within the industry feel the government and employers have handled the pandemic. This is just some of the responses we received:

"Contradictory rules, based on no logic. Boris is an absolute shambles who can't even brush his hair or do up his buttons correctly."

"I got sacked due to Covid, couldn't get another job during lockdown, and couldn't get ANY financial support whatsoever. Gone into thousands of pounds of debt due to the government's lack of support."

"The motor trade has been badly affected by Brexit and Covid. The UK government has repeatedly refused to accept that the motor trade needs extra help for 2020 and beyond that to ensure people stay in work."
